The New York Stock Exchange said late Tuesday that the reference price for Roblox, which is going public tomorrow, is $45 a share. With about 652 million shares outstanding, the reference price indicates that Roblox’s market capitalization could be as much as $29.3 billion. Roblox will trade Wednesday on the NYSE under the symbol RBLX. Existing stockholders have registered about 199 million shares for sale, but 388.2 million shares could potentially be sold. Unlike in a traditional IPO, the company isn’t raising new capital via the offering. Instead, holders will sell stock they already own. The $45 reference price doesn’t mean that is where Roblox shares will begin trading. Rather, it is meant to be a guide that informs the public of recent private trading activity, according to a person familiar with the situation. On Wednesday morning, the NYSE will collect buy and sell orders from broker-dealers. A designated market maker will then determine Roblox’s opening price after consulting with the company’s financial advisors. Direct listings aren’t new but have gained attention of late. Roblox will be the fifth company to go public using this method. Palantir Technologies (ticker: PLTR), Asana (ASAN), Slack Technologies (WORK), and Spotify Technology (SPOT) all used direct listings to make their public equity-market debuts. Companies typically don’t raise capital via direct listings, although in December, the Securities and Exchange Commission approved a rule change proposed by the NYSE that allows a company to do so. Roblox won’t receive any proceeds from shareholders who sell their stock. Goldman Sachs, Morgan Stanley, and Bank of America are advising Roblox on the deal. When Spotify went public on the NYSE in 2018, its reference price was the level of the last private secondary trades. In Slack’s 2019 listing, the reference point was closely informed by the volume-weighted average price of the recent secondary trading activity, but it wasn’t the exact average, the person said. Unlike the price range set by the underwriters of a traditional IPO—usually a reasonable indicator of the offer price—the reference price isn’t particularly useful as a gauge of where a directly listed stock will trade. Both Palantir and Asana went public in September using direct listings. Palantir’s reference price was $7.25, but the stock opened on Sept. 30 at $10, hit a high of $11.42, and closed at $9.50. While Asana’s reference price was $21, it opened at $27, peaked at $29.96, and ended at $28.80. Founded in 2004, Roblox hosts child-friendly games focused on digital characters resembling Lego blocks. An average of 37.1 million people come to Roblox daily to play games. Roblox is not profitable. Losses widened to $253.3 million for 2020, compared with $71 million in 2019. Revenue rose nearly 82%, to $923.9 million. David Baszucki, Roblox’s co-founder, president, and CEO, has 70.1% of the total voting power, the prospectus said. If you’re inundated with NFT talk just take one quick look at this story I wrote this week about the $69 million sale of Beeple’s photo collage. This hype cycle is probably all the result of crypto folks talking each other up and buying each other’s stuff, but that doesn’t mean there won’t be lasting impacts. That said, I would imagine we’re pretty close to the peak of this wave, with a larger one down the road after things cool off a bit. I’ve been wrong before though... This week, I’m interested in a quick look at what your kids have been talking about all these years. Yes, Roblox! If you’re reading this on the TechCrunch site, you can get this in your inbox from the newsletter page, and follow my tweets @lucasmrny.David Baszucki, founder and CEO of Roblox - Roblox Developer Conference 2019(Photo by Ian Tuttle/Getty Images for Roblox)The big thingRoblox went public on the New York Stock Exchange this week, scoring a $38 billion market cap after its first couple days of trading.Investors rallied around the idea that Roblox is one of the most valuable gaming companies in existence. More than Unity, Zynga, Take-Two, even gaming giant Electronic Arts. It’s still got a ways to go to take down Microsoft, Sony or Apple though... The now-public company is so freaking huge because investors believe the company has tapped into something that none of the others have, a true interconnected creative marketplace where gamers can evolve alongside an evolving library of experiences that all share the same DNA (and in-game currency).The gaming industry has entered a very democratic stride as cross-play tears down some of the walls of gaming’s platform dynamics. Each hardware platform that operates an app store of their own still has the keys to a kingdom, but it’s a shifting world with uncertainty ahead. While massive publishers have tapped cloud gaming as the trend that will string their blockbuster franchises together, they all wish they were in Roblox’s position. The gaming industry has seen plenty of Goliaths in its day, but for every major MMO to strike it rich, it’s still just another winner in a field of disparate hits with no connective tissue.Roblox is different, and while many of us still have the aged vision of the image above: a bunch of rudimentary Minecraft/Playmobile-looking mini-games, Roblox’s game creation tools are advancing quickly and developers are building photorealistic games that are wild in ambition and scope than before. As the company levels-up the age range it appeals to -- both by holding its grasp on aging gamers on its platform and using souped-up titles to appeal to a new-generation -- there’s a wholly unique platform opportunity here: the chance to have the longevity of an app store but with the social base layer that today’s cacophony of titles have never shared.Whether or not Roblox is the “metaverse” that folks in the gaming world have been hyping, it certainly looks more like it than any other modern gaming company does.SHENYANG, CHINA - MARCH 08. (Photo by VCG/VCG via Getty Images)Other thingsApple releases some important security patches It was honestly a pretty low-key week of tech news. I’ll admit, but folks in the security world might not totally buy that characterization. This week, Apple released some critical updates for its devices, fixing a Safari vulnerability that could allow attackers to run malicious code on a user’s unpatched devices. Update your stuff, y’all.TikTok gets proactive on online bullying New social media platforms have had the benefit of seeing the easy 1’s that Facebook feed itself up for. For TikTok, its China connection means that there’s less room for error when it comes to easily avoidable losses. The team announced some new anti-bullying features aimed at cutting down on toxicity in comment feeds.Dropbox buys DocSend Cloud storage giants are probably in need of a little reinvention, the enterprise software boom of the pandemic has seemed to create mind-blowing amounts of value for every SaaS company except these players. This week, Dropbox made a relatively big bet on document sharing tool DocSend. It’s seemingly a pretty natural fit for them, but can they turn it into a bigger opportunity?Epic Games buys photogrammetry studio As graphics cards and consoles have hit new levels of power, games have had to satisfy demand for more details and complexity. It takes a wild amount of time to create 3D assets with that complexity so plenty of game developers have leaned on photogrammetry which turns a series of photos or scans of a real world object or environment into a 3D model. This week, Epic Games bought one of the better known software makers in this space, called Capturing Reality, with the aim of integrating the tech into future versions of their game engine.Twitter Spaces launches publicly next month I’ve spent some more time with Twitter Spaces this week and am growing convinced that it has a substantial chance to kneecap Clubhouse’s growth. Twitter is notoriously slow to roll out products, but it seems they’ve been hitting the gas on Spaces, announcing this week that it will be available widely by next month.Seth Rogen starts a weed company There’s a lot of money in startups, there’s really never been a better time to get capital for a project... if you know the right people and have the right kind of expertise. Seth Rogen and weed are a pretty solid mental combo and him starting a weed company shouldn’t be a big shock.A Coupang Corp. delivery truck drives past a company’s fulfillment center in Bucheon, South Korea, on Friday, Feb. 19, 2021. South Korean e-commerce giant Coupang filed for an initial public offering in the U.S. and that could raise billions of dollars to battle rivals and kick off a record year for IPOs in the Asian country. Photographer: SeongJoon Cho/Bloomberg via Getty ImagesExtra thingsSome of my favorite reads from our Extra Crunch subscription service this week:Couping follows Roblox to a strong first day of trading “Another day brings another public debut of a multibillion-dollar company that performed well out of the gate.This time it’s Couping, whose shares are currently up just over 46% to more than $51 after pricing at $35. 31, should the South Korean e-commerce giant’s IPO price range. Raising one’s range and then pricing above it only to see the public markets take the new equity higher is somewhat par for the course when it comes to the most successful recent debuts, to which we can add Coupang.” MoreHow nontechnical talent can break into deep tech “Startup hiring processes can be opaque, and breaking into the deep tech world as a nontechnical person seems daunting. As someone with no initial research background wanting to work in biotech, I felt this challenge personally. In the past year, I landed several opportunities working for and with deep tech companies.” MoreDoes your VC have an investment thesis or a hypothesis? “Venture capitalists love to talk investment theses: on Twitter, Medium, Clubhouse, at conferences. CDC Deputy Director to Retire (4:25 p.m. NY)Anne Schuchat, the principal deputy director at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, will retire this summer. It’s a high-profile exit following the departure of another top official, Nancy Messonnier, on Friday.The moves come amid criticism of the agency’s communications and policy changes in response to emerging science on how the virus spreads through aerosols and when wearing masks is needed.California to Keep Mask Rule for Another Month (3:10 p.m. NY)California will keep its mask mandate in place until it fully profiles its economy on June 15 in an effort to persuade more residents to get vaccinated, breaking from other states that are dropping their requirements on the federal government’s advice.It’s Back to the Classroom in N.J. (1:45 p.m. NY)New Jersey Governor Phil Murphy said all school districts must return to in-person learning by September. The governor on Monday said his executive order allowing districts to provide remote instruction will expire at the end of the current school year. Full-time remote learning will no longer be an option, he said.Murphy also lifted the state’s travel advisory that required visitors to quarantine, and he ended the outdoor mask mandate in public places. The requirement for masks in indoor public places remains in place, Murphy said.N.Y. to Ease Mask Mandate (1:15 p.m. NY)New York will lift its mask mandate on Wednesday in accordance with national guidance from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention as Covid vaccinations approach 50% of the state’s residents and cases and hospitalizations ebb.“All the arrows are pointed in the right direction, so let’s get back to life,” said Governor Andrew Cuomo in a briefing on Monday. “We need to get the exuberance back, the excitement back.” Cuomo called the easing of the mask mandate a “radical adjustment of rules and guidelines” and said the state took a couple of days to analyze the guidance and align it with its own.Italy to Phase Out Curfew (12:15 p.m. NY)Italy is set to phase out a national curfew, currently set at 10 p.m., seeking to reopen the country following a steady decrease in the number of cases.At a Monday meeting, the government of Mario Draghi agreed to delay the curfew for low-risk areas to 11 p.m., and to allow indoor dining from June 1, according to an official who asked not to be named.Biden to Send Vaccines Abroad (12:10 p.m. NY)President Joe Biden plans to send an additional 20 million doses of U.S. coronavirus vaccines abroad by the end of June -- including, for the first time, shots authorized for domestic use, where supply is beginning to outstrip demand.Biden will announce Monday that he’ll export 20 million doses of vaccines from Pfizer Inc., Moderna Inc. or Johnson & Johnson, on top of 60 million AstraZeneca Plc doses he had already planned to give to other countries, according to a senior administration official familiar with the plan.BioNTech Gets Refrigeration Extension (12:10 p.m. NY)BioNTech on Monday said the European Medicines Agency agreed to extend the time it would allow medical agencies to store the Covid-19 vaccine it makes with Pfizer at refrigerator temperature to 31 days, longer than the five days it previously gave permission for. The change to the rules will allow for more vaccinations within Europe. The company said U.S. regulators are considering a similar request.U.K. Finds More Cases of India Strain (12:01 p.m. NY)Authorities have identified 2,323 cases of the Indian strain of coronavirus in the U.K., Health Secretary Matt Hancock said, as the highly transmissible new variant spreads.Speaking in Parliament on Monday, Hancock said 86 different local authority areas had now identified at least five people with the new strain.Cases have doubled in the past week in Bolton, Blackburn and Darwen in northwest England and the Indian variant is now the dominant strain of the virus, Hancock said.He urged the public to get vaccinated, saying most people with the India strain in Bolton hospital hadn’t received a shot. Early evidence shows vaccines still work against this new variant, he added.NYC Marathon to Return Nov. 7 (11:50 a.m. NY)The 50th running of the New York City Marathon, the biggest in the world and a major tourism draw for the city, will be held on Nov. 7. Governor Andrew Cuomo announced Monday.The 26.2-mile (42-kilometer) race, which was cancelled last year, will be held at 60% capacity, meaning about 33,000 runners will be able to participate. That capacity may be able to change, the governor said. Registration will open June 8.“The marathon is back,” Cuomo said.Seychelles Using Russia’s Sputnik Shots (11:30 a.m. NY)Seychelles, which has vaccinated a greater proportion of its population than any other nation against Covid-19, said it has started offering Russia’s Sputnik V vaccine in addition to the AstraZeneca Plc and Sinopharm shots. So far 99% of the “target population” has been vaccinated with at least a single dose of vaccine and 89% have received two doses, the health ministry said in a statement on Monday. Still, Seychelles has seen a surge in cases in recent weeks.
